The diagram shows a 1000 nm long optical waveguide. The waveguide is divided into 100 segments, each 10 nm long. The segments are color-coded: yellow for active regions (lasers and amplifiers) and light blue for passive regions. The layout includes a laser at the input, followed by a series of amplifiers and lasers. The waveguide is terminated by a 100 nm long resistor at the output.

A long horizontal bar chart representing a 100% distribution. The bar is composed of numerous small squares, each representing a percentage point. The colors of the squares vary, indicating different categories or groups. From left to right, the sequence of colors includes yellow, blue, green, red, orange, purple, brown, grey, and white. The total length of the bar represents 100%.
