Hi Andrew,

A future café / restaurant use would likely have more potential for noise to impact the adjacent properties (and odour depending on stack location). If we could restrict the use to reiki only that would help. If they wanted to change in the future, would they have to put in some sort of variation or apply for a COU again?

Based on what they have said is involved in reiki, I don't think a sound proofing scheme would involve anything apart from keeping the volume of the music low.

Kind Regards,

Hi Ian,

Thanks for your email. I have spoken to Alan about the application.

He has requested whether you feel a condition requiring a scheme of noise proofing would be warranted? Also do we want to restrict the use to a reiki studio? What effect could a café/restaurant etc have on amenity if they were to change the use in future (along with the ground floor of the premises).

Kind Regards

Andrew Hunt
